Welcome to the Coven!

Hello dear reader, and welcome! For many Pagans, the notion of joining a coven has crossed their mind at one point or another, but who has time for all that? Where do you even meet like-minded folks? It's possible that you've chewed on the idea for a while, but never had the opportunity. If this is the case for you, we're happy to let you know that there is warm seat around the bonfire waiting for you, and friends you haven't met just yet.

WHAT'S IN THIS ISSUE:

- Upcoming Events
- Plant Parenting Tips
- Money Bowl Spell

Tree of Knowledge Coven is organized by a handful of Teachers in our inner grove. The outer grove of our coven is a large, supportive community of friends and family that come together to learn, celebrate the seasons, and support each other. If you're interested in being part of the coven, we would love to meet you! No need to jump through any hoops; just stop by at any public gathering and meet some new friends. Of course, bringing some Hawaiian Rolls wouldn't hurt.

TIPS FOR RAISING A HEALTHY BABY PLANT

CARE TIPS FOR NEW PLANT PARENTS

- Check their bottoms regularly. As plants grow, so do their roots which can lead to trouble with water drainage.
- Double check the nursery before bringing your sprout home. Is that sunny window too close to the AC vent? Is it too sunny?
- Will they get along with siblings? Do some research before adopting to find out if your bouncing begonia is safe for pets and kids
- When your sprout has out grown the little container you brought them home in, learn what soil they prefer before moving to a "big kid pot"
- Though the chlorine in tap water can be hard on your plants, you can let the water set overnight to allow the chlorine to dissipate as gas.

LINES WRITTEN IN EARLY SPRING

BY WILLIAM WORDSWORTH

I heard a thousand blended notes,
While in a grove I sate reclined,
In that sweet mood when pleasant thoughts
Bring sad thoughts to the mind.

To her fair works did Nature link
The human soul that through me ran;
And much it grieved my heart to think
What man has made of man.

Through primrose tufts, in that green bower,
The periwinkle trailed its wreaths;
And 'tis my faith that every flower
Enjoys the air it breathes.

The birds around me hopped and played,
Their thoughts I cannot measure:—
But the least motion which they made
It seemed a thrill of pleasure.

The budding twigs spread out their fan,
To catch the breezy air;
And I must think, do all I can,
That there was pleasure there.

If this belief from heaven be sent,
If such be Nature's holy plan,
Have I not reason to lament
What man has made of man?

MONEY BOWL SPELL

ADD A LAYER OF SALT IN THE BOTTOM OF A GREEN BOWL. AS YOU ADD EACH INGREDIENT, HOLD IT IN YOUR HAND AND CHANTING:

"GREEN IS THE COLOR OF MONEY, GREEN MONEY COMES MY WAY, GREEN MONEY FLOWS SO EASILY, AND ALL MY BILLS ARE PAID"

WHEN YOU ARE FINISHED, HOLD THE BOWL IN BOTH HANDS AND VISUALIZE YOURSELF LIVING AN ABUNDANT LIFE (WHATEVER THAT LOOKS LIKE FOR YOU) AND SAY:

"EVERY DOLLAR I SPEND RETURNS TO ME TENFOLD"

PICK YOUR POISON

Black Thumb Gardeners

We all know someone who is blessed with the ability to grow beautiful blooms well past their season or bring seemingly lifeless plants back from the dead like an herbal necromancer. For every miraculous "green thumb" out there, surely nature must balance the scale by blessing someone the gift of killing even the heartiest of aloe plants. In a family full of wise and gifted gardeners, I am the one daughter with "the black thumb".

Sage Advice

Recently, a dear friend heard about the carnage of my many gardening efforts, and he suggested a brilliant solution. "Just grow poisonous plants," he said. "They're harder to kill." As a parent of a human child and a cat with no self preservation instinct, the thought had never occurred to me, but it made perfect sense!

Poison Planting

Now, the idea of creating a poisonous indoor garden can sound a little intimidating, but it is remarkably easy! In fact, many popular houseplants are toxic to humans and pets. For this reason, I strongly caution you to avoid this sort of project if you have young kids or curious pets.

PICK YOUR POISON

Philodendron

This is possibly one of the most popular house plants, but is very toxic to pets, and even small children. This vining plant is very easy to grow and can be hung or placed on a tall shelf to keep it out of reach (pictured Below)

Lily

Lilies are some of the most beautiful flowers, but are incredibly dangerous for pets. Mind you, not all lilies are toxic, but it is best to err on the side of caution if you're not sure which you have. The most toxic varieties are the Calla Lily (which can be fatal to children), Easter Lily, Rubrum Lily, Tiger Lily, Day Lily, and Asian Lily.

Pothos Ivy

Pothos Ivy, also called Devil's Ivy is hearty, and great for purifying the air in your home. It's only mildly harmful in small quantities, but can be lethal in large doses. Though it can be fatal, in most cases, it causes swelling of the lips, throat, and tongue. (pictured above)

Safety First!

Before bringing home any potentially poisonous plants, it is important to ensure that they will not put any pets or people in your home in danger. Click the skull below to visit the Indiana Poison Center and learn more about how you can keep your family safe from poisonous plants,

Oleander

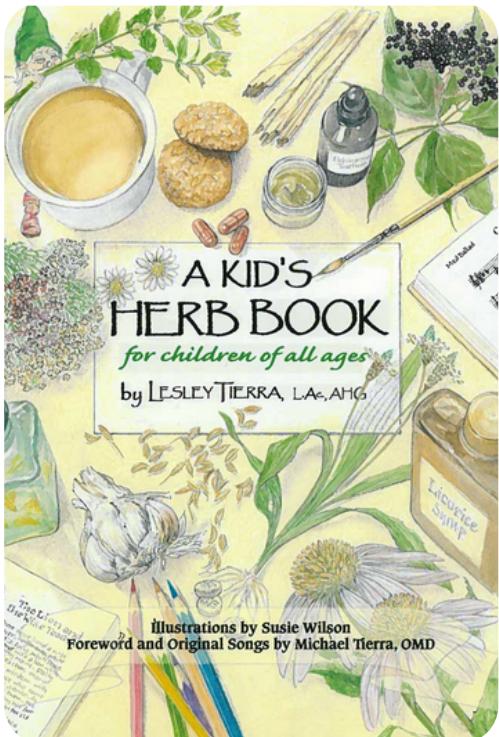

Oleander is as beautiful as it is deadly. This lovely plant is so toxic that even ingesting honey made from its nectar can cause symptoms in adults. Deaths in adult humans have been reported with as little as one leaf eaten, but the majority of deaths occur when very large amounts are ingested. Children are more susceptible and should be kept away from Oleander plants.

SPRING EQUINOX BOOK REVIEW

A Kid's Herb Book by Lesley Tierra

LEMON BALM TEA

The best way to make lemon balm tea is an infusion. This is because lemon balm has a lot of volatile oils. These oils are what give lemon balm such a wonderful strong odor. Follow the directions for making an infusion, using 1 large handful of fresh lemon balm plants, or 1 teaspoon dried lemon balm for each cup of tea.

CHILDREN'S HAPPY POTION

Do you feel sad or blue? Well, cheer up with the Children's Happy Potion! Lemon balm and chamomile tea is a perfect combination for many children's complaints: restlessness, insomnia, whining, crying, colic, teething, sadness and depression. To make:

- Infuse 1 teaspoon lemon balm and $\frac{1}{2}$ teaspoon chamomile in 1 cup of water.
- Strain and sweeten to taste.

LEMON BALM, THE HAPPY HERB

Did you know that lemon balm comforts the heart and drives away sadness? It does this by soothing the nervous system, which lifts the spirits. A famous Greek physician, Galen, said that "Lemon balm doth maketh the heart merry." It used to be combined with lemon peel, nutmeg and angelica root for all nervous problems.

A KID'S HERB BOOK BY LESLEY TIERRA

Many of us have memories of warm Summer days in the yard, grabbing handfuls of plants to mix into "potions" with mud and dandelions. Perhaps, you have little one's in your life that create similar concoctions! If I could recommend any book to a young, budding naturalist, it would be A Kid's Herb Book. This is the perfect book for kids (and adults) that are curious about herbs, but want to start with safe, familiar plants that can be found in the backyard or grocery store. It is rare to find a book that offers a wealth of practical information while also maintaining a sense of wonder and whimsy to keep even the youngest readers enchanted.

From the lovingly hand-drawn sketches, to the songs and chants, this book is as much playful as it is educational. Along with information about many herbs, you can also learn history and lore behind them, meditations to get to know their uses, and even kid-friendly recipes like homemade marshmallows and root beer.

Whether you are a beginner herbalist or a proud parent of a potion maker, there is something for everyone in this book. It has earned a place of honor on our shelf, and we still return to many of the recipes and remedies after all these years. We hope you enjoy this book (and the lemon balm "Happy Potion") as much as we do.

SPRINGTIME FEAST

WHATS IN SEASON?

SPRINGTIME FEAST

ASPARAGUS

We couldn't have a Spring produce all-star lineup without asparagus. You may not be a fan of this veggie (especially if you've had it from a can), but I encourage you to give it a try when it's at its peak this Spring.

BRUSSELS SPROUTS

These sweet baby cabbages have gotten a bad rap for too long! If you turned your nose up at these as a kid, give them another chance with some olive oil, honey, and balsamic vinegar drizzled over them. Once they're dressed up, bake for 30 minutes at 350 degrees.

CAULIFLOWER

Rest assured, I'm not going to suggest you make a pizza crust or pancake with cauliflower. There's no sense ruining a good thing. However, if you treat it well, cauliflower can be a filling and tasty dish, too! For an easy side dish to lighten up any pasta meal, boil some cabbage until it is just tender, and strain it. Whip out the potato masher and go to town while mixing in milk, parmesan cheese, garlic, salt, and pepper.

DANDELION

I'm not pulling your leg. You can make a variety of great dishes with the whole plant! Tea from dandelion roots can be a little bitter, but has many health benefits. The leaves can be washed, soaked, and tossed with a pinch of sugar, lemon juice, and olive oil for a budget-friendly salad. And if you haven't tried fried dandelion heads, you are in for a treat, and kids love them! Pick a few handfuls of dandelions and soak them in water for about 30 minutes to remove dirt & ants. Then dry and dip them in egg & milk. Coat them in seasoned flour or breadcrumbs. Half the fun is experimenting to see which you like best.

You can make them savory with salt, pepper, a pinch of garlic, and half a squeeze of lemon. Another option if you want something sweet, simple, and fast is to dip them in pancake batter and toss them in the pan with some butter. Then, flip them like a pancake and cover with powdered sugar. Enjoy!

SPRING MENU IDEAS

Dandelion Pancakes with strawberries
& powdered sugar

Spring salad with lettuce, spinach, collards, and dandelions greens

Chicken with roasted asparagus, both seasoned with salt, pepper, garlic, and rosemary

Stir fry with broccoli, cauliflower, sweet peppers, and mushrooms

Lemon balm iced tea by the glass
or frozen into popsicles

SPIRITUAL HIBERNATION

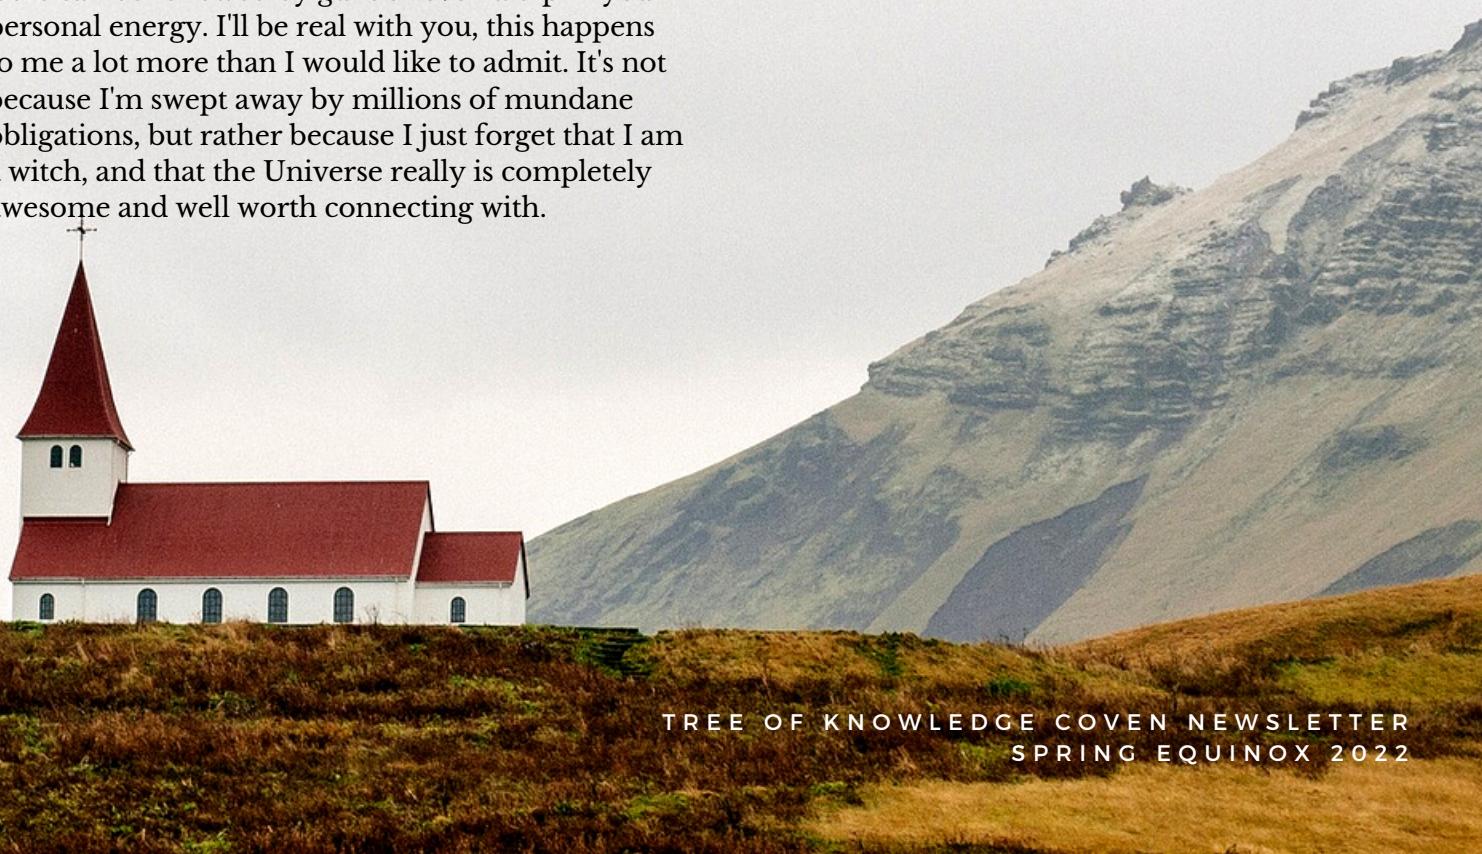

Whether you been practiving your craft for a year or a lifetime, there is a good chance that you have fallen into "the rut". Here are some tips for digging your way out

By Brittany Phillips

Since the moment the warm-fuzzy glow of discovering my spiritual path wore off, and still to this day, I occasionally suffered from "The Rut". Have you ever thought to yourself, "Crap... when was the last time that I did a ritual? or meditated? What phase is the moon in, anyway?" Unlike most religions, we don't really have rules saying that we need to pray at certain times, or visit a building on certain days. We have few or no rules (depending on your tradition), no expected schedule of worship, and no holy book of guidelines; We are pretty much all winging it on our own path. And this is wonderful! We are free to connect to the Divine however we want! We are our own sacred temples and the only preist/ess that can tell us how to worship is our own Spirit. We are the Divine!

However, we are also human, and humans are lazy. And kind of forgetful. And easily distracted. So naturally, sometimes we wander from our spiritual path, and get stuck. This realization that you aren't currently as connected to your Craft as you once were can be followed by guilt or even a dip in your personal energy. I'll be real with you, this happens to me a lot more than I would like to admit. It's not because I'm swept away by millions of mundane obligations, but rather because I just forget that I am a witch, and that the Universe really is completely awesome and well worth connecting with.

For a while, I thought that I was the only witch who suffered from "the rut" because my circle of Pagan friends was very tiny at the time. Then, my fabulous former Craft partner loaned me an amazing book (The Witch's Bag of Tricks by Melanie Marquis) that seemed to be the kick-in-the-pants that I needed to boost me out of my funk. Clearly, I can't be the only witch with this chronic lack of inspiration because the first chapter of this helpful book is titled, "Out of the Rut, and Into the Fire". Here, Marquis states that, "There are two places in particular on the path where we are likely to get stuck in a rut of magickal mediocrity if we don't actively take steps to climb higher. The first occurs when we reach a point in our development where we've learned all the basics of magic [...] We look to books, but most are geared toward particular denominations, or are too basic." The other time being, "When we've been practicing magick for so long that we take it for granted".

SPIRITUAL HIBERNATION

If this hits close to home for you, then you are not alone. This is a common experience, and is particularly tough in the cold months when the Earth lays dormant, energy is low, and many people are stuck indoors with limited inspiration.

If you find yourself in "the rut" while reading this, I would like to invite you to take a deep breath. Exhale any guilt or shame you might feel, because neither is helping you. Does the bear feel guilt for hibernating when her body calls for rest? Does the tree feel shame when it draws its sap inward through the Winter? No, dear reader. They take time to recover and rest through the Winter. There is nothing wrong with you doing the same.

CHECK ON YOUR ALTAR

What does it look like? Is it cluttered and unused? Is the energy stagnant? Your alter is a reflection of you and your craft. If it has stale energy and seems neglected, you're the bad-ass witch to change that! Your world without reflects your world within, and vice versa. If you can't change your state of mind, change the state of your alter, and give it a good cleansing. You might be tempted to use this lovely, energized alter now that it doesn't have cat hair and candle stumps all over it.

DAILY RITUAL

Aim to do just one thing everyday that you find to be spiritually rewarding. You can incorporate a small, simple ritual into your daily routine to remind you that each day is sacred. You can say a quick prayer before meals and pass bread/bowls around the table with a heartfelt "may you never hunger" to your loved ones, lay in the sun and meditate at high-noon, watch the sunset in the west, or have a quiet moment at your alter before bed. You can do one, none, or all of these, as long as it feels right to you.

So, what can you do to boot yourself out of "the rut"? The best advice that I've received came from my working partner: Just write. Write about anything, or nothing. Just write something. Nowadays, that is my go-to move when I'm not sure what to do with my path. I write in my Mirror Book (a journal of magickal reflections) and just meditate on whats going on right now in my life, and eventually, an idea or a gentle nudge from the Divine pushes me in a direction that feels right. Just write something every day, even if it's just a sentence or two. If that doesn't light a fire under you, you can try these activities...

MAKE A WITCH BAG

Make a Witch Bag. Simply, dump whatever books you're reading, a few divination tools, or whatever else you feel might be useful into a bag to carry with you (and yes, this is for men, too.)

Do you have trouble remembering what the moon is up to or when it will be full? You wont have an excuse with a handy-dandy almanac in your witch bag. I recommend Llewellyn's Witches' Datebook which shows astrological events, shares recipes, has interesting articles, spells, and poetry.

GET OUT THERE

Go on a nature outing as often as you can. For us city folk, it can be hard to connect to the Earth through a foot of pavement. So get out there! Swim in a river! Go for a hike! Lay in the grass!

Take a field trip to a New Age store you've never been to. You can get a professional tarot reading, meet new Pagan folks, take a workshop, get some cool jewelry, etc. Go have some fun.

STAY CONNECTED

Stay in touch with what's happening in the world around you and sign up for updates from Pagan news sources such as Pagan Newswire Collective or The Wild Hunt. Get in touch with other Pagans near you. You may have reached that point where you've learned as much as you can from books, and you would like to learn from others in person. You can connect through various resources such as Facebook groups, TikTok, or groups that meet at spiritual stores.

GRIMOIRE MAKEOVER

If you feel like you've outgrown your Craft, maybe you've outgrown your Book of Shadows as well. Does it have random print-outs and notes shoved in it? Go through and straighten it up, or start a second volume if you are running out of space.

You can find some helpful ideas and inspiration for starting or updating your sacred books on our coven's website.

NOVEL IDEAS

Break out your Harry Potter books. No, you never get too old. If you don't like reading a book twice, scout out witchcraft fiction at the library. The Circle of Five books by Dolores Stewart Riccio are about a real, honest to goodness group of witches without all of that Hollywood nonsense. If you have never heard of Terry Pratchett, get acquainted because his Discworld books are phenomenal and cleverly funny.

HIT THE BOOKS

If there is an area of study that you're interested in, get a book on the topic. If there is already a seed of inspiration, water that bad-boy and see what it grows into. You could have a new hobby or end up starting your own Tradition. Start a long-term project relating to whatever you're interested in. You can write a grimoire to collect all the knowledge that you've learned from that new book you just got. You could start a garden, a blog, a sanctum sanctorum, etc. Get crackin'

MOVIE MAGIC

Have a magick movie night. Gather some friends, or cats, or make a blanket fort (you never get too old) and watch movies that inspire you and take you back to that warm, fuzzy newbie feeling. Practical Magic, the Craft, and Mists of Avalon are my personal favorites.

If you're wanting to get out more and spend time with friends, you can even take turn hosting a movie night each week or month!

TUNE IN

Listen to Pagan music, or any other music that inspires your magickal side while you're going about your mundane life. Even doing dishes can be fabulous! If you're dancing to SJ Tucker. Even better, if you have a Spotify playlist of Pagan artists running in the background all day, You are supporting your fellow witches and fueling your own inspiration!

Bonus points if you start a drum circle with friends!

Dear Parents,

We are so excited to offer events and social groups where our younger family members can make new friends, have fun experiences and activities, and explore their own spiritual path. Volunteers within our coven are working hard to ensure that these events are fun, engaging, but most importantly SAFE. Below are some of the measures that we have put in place to ensure the safety and comfort of all youths joining our events:

- First Aid kits will be present at every event, we aim to have at least one First Aid Certified volunteer present at each event.
- Each adult volunteer will receive a background check before leading any programs or events
- No less than two adults will be present at each event, and an adult volunteer will never be alone with a youth guest.
- Youth activities & events will always take place in a public setting, rather than in a private home.
- An outline of the discussion topics and activities will be available for parents and guardians to review prior to each event in the Spiritual Sprout & Teen Circle Magazines.
- Before any youth can attend an event, their parent must fill out a Permission & Waiver Form (found on the next page).
- Age limits will determine which activities a youth can participate in
 - Ages 2-12 Kids Activities
 - Ages 13-17 Teen Activities

All these measures are in place to ensure the safety and comfort of the youths in our community, their parents/guardians, and our volunteers. If you have any questions about our events or these policies, please reach out to us at

Best Wishes,
